INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

I am indebted for the success of this exhibition to the courtesy of the following eminent collectors: R. B. Adam, Esq., of Buffalo, N. Y., who generously placed at the disposal of the University the invaluable collection of his late father, the Hon. R. B. Adam; A. Edward Newton, Esq., of Daylesford, Pennsylvania, who has given assistance not only by his loans but by an enthusiasm as continuous as it has been keen; Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia, who has kindly sent us the only known copy of Johnson's poem pronounced at the opening of the Drury Lane Theatre; and J. Pierpont Morgan, Esq., of New York City, who has lent four of his unique MSS. For engravings, some of which are for sale, we are indebted to Messrs. Keppel & Company and Messrs. J. O. Wright & Company of New York City.

To thank all who have given me assistance in originating and arranging this exhibition would be a gracious but impracticable task; but I cannot end even this brief note without an expression of my gratitude to Mr. George E. Dimock, whose ready generosity has alone enabled us to defray the necessary expense of such an exhibition.

C. B. T.

I. Manuscripts, Letters, and Proof-sheets.

1. Manuscript of Johnson's Life of Pope, with a letter of the author's concerning the collection of material for the work.

Lent by Mr. Morgan.

2. Proof-sheets of Johnson's Life of Pope, with corrections in his own hand. On the first page is written in Fanny Burney's hand, "Proof-sheets, given by Dr. Johnson to F. B."

From the Adam Collection.

3. Correspondence of Johnson and Dodd, the famous convict, containing in all thirty-two documents.

Lent by Mr. Newton.

4. Letter of Johnson to Mrs. Thrale, October 24, 1778, inserted in Mrs. Thrale's copy of the Dictionary.

Lent by Mr. Newton.

5. Correspondence of Johnson with the Rev. Dr. Taylor.

Lent by Mr. Morgan.

6. Johnson's last New Year prayer. 1784.

Lent by Mr. Morgan.

7. Manuscript of Mrs. Piozzi's Anecdotes of the Late Samuel Johnson.

Lent by Mr. Morgan.

8. Proof-sheets of Boswell's Life of Johnson, with corrections in Boswell's own hand. Two volumes.

From the Adam Collection.

9. Selected insertions in the extra-illustrated volumes relating to Johnson lent by Mr. Adam. These volumes are so rich in original manuscripts, letters, and engravings that an enumeration is impracticable; but among the treasures which may be mentioned are: Johnson's famous letter to Macpherson; numerous letters to and from Mrs. Thrale; letters of Boswell, Goldsmith, Garrick, Reynolds, Burke, and others; the preliminary draft for the Plan of an English Dictionary; and a manuscript list of the members of the Literary Club. For a description of the various items, see cards.

II. Editions of Johnson's Works.

(Unless otherwise noted, all are first editions.)

10. Translation of Lobo's Voyage to Abyssinia. London, 1735. Johnson's first independent publication.
From the Yale Library.
